

Peng Nie is now professor in Economics at the Xi'an Jiaotong University in Xi'an, China. He is Deputy Director of the Center for Ageing Health and Geriatrics, Global Health Institute, Xi'an Jiaotong University, Senior Research Fellow at the Institute for Health Care & Public Management, University of Hohenheim in Stuttgart (Germany), and Research Fellow at Global Labor Organization (GLO). He obtained his PhD in Economics from the University of Hohenheim in August 2015. His research interests focus on issues related to health economics, labor economics and development economics.

Recently he has begun to perform research in the economics of health inequality such as inequality of opportunity in health in China. He has published in the international journals such as Nature, Nature Medicine, Energy Economics, Review of Income and Wealth, China Economic Review, Economics and Human Biology, Kyklos, BMC Geriatrics, Social Indicators Research, Obesity, and Obesity Reviews.

He is a member of International Health Economics Association (Member of the Scientific Committee Review Panel), Health Econometrics and Data Group (HEDG, University of York, UK), The Chinese Economists Society, Youth Committee of China Health Economics Association (Committee Member). He is now an Associate Editor of The Journal of the Economics of Ageing, and editorial board member of BMC Geriatrics, BMC Public Health, and Labor History.